Three Big Artists In a Programme All-Beethoven

Yeaye, Godowsky and Gerardy, at Carnegie Hall, Play Three of the Master's Best Known Compositions.

By Sylvester Rawling.

BEETHOVEN programme by three distinguished musicians drew a large audience to Carnegie Hall Yesterday afternoon. The performers were Eugene Tsaye, wiclinist: Jean Ge-rardy, 'cellist, and Leopold Godowsky, Manist, who played with rare artistic on, lovely unity, and an apprechation of the composer that had some-thing in it of reverence. The latter quality was reflected in the bearing of those privileged to hear them play. any three works were presented, but and three works were presented, but it was close upon half-past 5 o'clook before the last notes were sounded. Tet there had been eager attention throughout, and nearly everybody remained to henor the players with repeated calls. The opening number was the trie in 5 flat that the master dedicated to his patron, friend and pupil, the Austrian Satron, friend and pupil, the Austrian Archduke Rudolf. At first sight, it seemed that this should have been saved or the end, but, after all, the plan of introducing the three artists at once had ts advantages. Both Mr. Ysaye and Mr. Godowsky had been heard here within a week. It was Mr. Gerardy's first appearance in six or seven years. His beautiful, rich, full tone, therefore, first daimed attention. Mr. Ysaye, fully possessed of his land legs—he was just off a steamer, after a stormy voyage, when he gave his recital in holiday week—played in his most distinguished style. So did Mr. Godowsky. The continence of each of the trio was no less worthy of praise than the co-ordination that led to such a beautiful presentment of the 'celle, Mr. Gerardy had his best oppor-tunity and was most impressive. The same may be said of Mr. Yeaye in the "Kreutser" sonata in A major for plano and violin. It was a masterful exhibition that he gave of his part in this appealing composition. As for Mr. Godowsky, who worked the hardest of the three because he was always present, by was never more eatisfying.

BOELLNES QUARTET HEARD

IN INTERESTING PROGRAMME. The Zoeliner Quartet, which gave the chamber music concert for the People's lymphony Society at Cooper Union on Sonday evening, pleasing the eager music-lover followers of Frans X. Arens, expected at Acollan Hall last night and wen fresh admiration. This family or-mulation, of which Antoinette Zoell-mer is the first violinist, the other three bers being men, has high musical ligence, plays crisply and in fine m, and offers unhackneyed proascunow's suite in C major, his opus a facebating work, with passages of eat beauty. This was followed by a "Romantische Serenade," by Jan dis-Buys, a tone-; ainting of night, priginal, odd, a bit puzzling at first, but compelling before end. Of course, is needed no excuse fr , with "Papa" Haydn's charming quartet No. 1, in G major, MARTINELLI GAINS FAVOR

AT THE METROPOLITAN. Giovanni Martinelli, who was Radames in a repetition of "Aida" at the Metropelitan Opera House last night, grows steadily in public favor. He sang "Celeste Aida" worthly, and in the Nile scene his voice and his acting fairly aroused a house that was as large as it ever is save when Caruso sings. The blaze finally was held to the first floor, basesent, cellar and sub-cellar, all occupied by the Manhattan Art Company.

The fire started amod stored crayon portraits, frames and other highly inflammable material. Oscar Miller, proprietor, said the furnace had been out of order and a repair man had been at work. Only Miller and his office force were in the building about 12.30 o'clock. when dense smoke choked the light shaft. All rushed to the street, and Miller started to turn in an alarm, when a pedestrian began to argue with him that it probably was only a smoking chimney. This delay gave the fire a start, and when the firemen got there they had trouble ahead. They had to aght the blaze from without.

The fire was got under control, with a mall loss of $1,500. The Eighth street were tied up and great crowds of urning workers gave reserves from Mercer street police station their
